Having Our Say is a novel written by Amy Hearth with the help of Sadie and Bessie Delany. These two extraordinary women tell their story about how their family survived through segregation and racism in the South. Sadie and Bessie encountered racism early in their lives while the Jim Crow laws were in play. Throughout the South, it was required that blacks and whites were separated and had Having Our Say: The Delany Sisters' First 100 Years - Home ...

Tells the story of Sadie and Bessie Delany, two African-American (they preferred "colored") sisters who both lived past the age of 100. They grew up on a North Carolina college campus, the daughters of the first African-American Episcopal bishop, who was born a slave, and a woman with an inter-racial background.

Having Our Say is the life story of two black sisters, as told by them, with assistance from Amy Hill Hearth. Their life story begins with very early childhood memories, and the history of their ancestors. I found this to be an extraordinary tale of the realism expressed by the Delany sisters, and the challenges and successes throughout their longevity.
